or allowing them to use his fireplace in the flat. Scollans had always been satisfied with the work of the witness while he remained with a watch about his waist, and also gave him a ride. That was before his trial.

Prosecution Rests.

Inspector Mortimer testified that he went to New York, Hudson and New Brunswick in search of Scollans and Foy, but did not find them.

Inspector John McLeary, who arrested and extradited Scollans, said that Scollans went under the name of Theodore Stevens. The government rested its case at 10 o'clock.

At 10 o'clock during the conference with the jury, the judge said that the government had rested its case. The jury then retired to the jury box. The judge said that the government had rested its case. The jury then retired to the jury box. The judge said that the government had rested its case. The jury then retired to the jury box.

SCOLLANS.

Scollans, who was a broker, became acquainted with Foy through the fact that Foy was engaged in furthering the stock deals for Mr. Harroghs. Dowling was the man who introduced them.

SULLIVAN.

had a desk in Scollans's office. His business called them together daily.

Scollans had a right to look up the jury list. The only money exchanged in the office was in the regular way of business. He knew nothing about tampering with the jurors, until the day the trial was held. He did not know Foy, but he knew that Scollans had a right to look up the jury list. He did not know Foy, but he knew that Scollans had a right to look up the jury list.

Scollans on the Stand.

The defendant was sworn and testified as follows:

"I was born in Boston, living in Brighton. I am married and have two girls. The first I knew that any of the jurors had been tampered with was when I saw a man named Sullivan, who was a friend of mine, talking to a man named Sullivan. He said that Sullivan was a friend of mine, and that Sullivan was a friend of mine."

Doubtful of Fair Trial.

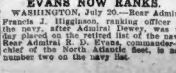

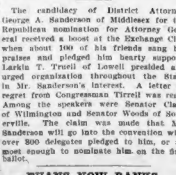

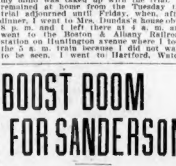

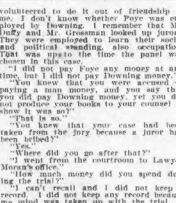

"I had a conference with my counsel as a result of the newspaper publicity about the case. I talked with Lawrence Menon, Henshaw and Baker. I went away as a result of my counsel's advice. I did not get a fair trial."

Met Foy at City Hall.

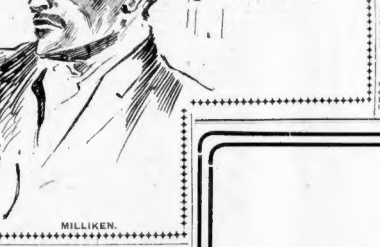

"I met Foy first through his being at City Hall. I did not know him very well, but I knew that he was a friend of mine. I met him at City Hall, and he was a friend of mine. I met him at City Hall, and he was a friend of mine."

SAYS BLACK ART SEPARATED HER FROM SERVANTS

Mrs. Ingraham Declares Husband Employed Necromancy to Get Her Divorced.

HE IS SUING FOR ANNUITY

Mrs. Edith Ingraham, well known in Boston as the divorced wife of "Count" Driggs West, Boston office boy, cupping and London social light, has again come into prominence, this time as the defendant in a suit filed by Mr. Ingram, her husband, for annuity.

Mrs. Ingram asserts that her husband, who is a well-known social light, has been employed by her to get her divorced. She claims that her husband has been employed by her to get her divorced. She claims that her husband has been employed by her to get her divorced.

"Asked Me to Marry Her."

In reply Mr. Ingram asserts that all of these statements by his wife are false. He contends in his statement to the court that his wife asked him to marry her, but that he declined to do so. He claims that his wife has been employed by him to get her divorced.

Divorced in 1903.

The divorce of Driggs West and his wife, who was Miss Edith West, was granted in May, 1903, and the following September her marriage to Mr. Ingram was solemnized in the City of New York. The divorce was granted in May, 1903, and the following September her marriage to Mr. Ingram was solemnized in the City of New York.

Parties for Servants.

The taking of parties for servants, it is said, was a common practice in the Ingram household. The parties were given for servants, and the Ingram household was known for its parties for servants.

Talk of Compromise.

Negotiations are under way to compromise the case. The parties are under way to compromise the case. The parties are under way to compromise the case.
